Banks dismissed as Black Student Advisor

Debra Peterson
Staff Writer

UMD Black Student Advisor Henry Banks was dismissed from his position on Nov. 18.

Achievement Center, is now in charge of finding a temporary replacement who will finish the advisor duties for the academic year. She is also responsible for finding someone to fill the permanent position of black student advisor.

Belote said the search for a permanent advisor will begin sometime in February and will involve a nation-wide search.

A search committee has already been appointed with Belote heading the committee; Debra Warner, an assistant education specialist with supportive services, as chairper-

"Mr. Banks did not fulfill one of the requirements of the position. I cannot tell you what that was."

-Dr. Robert Franz

Dr. Robert Franz, acting associate vice chancellor for academic administration, in an interview conducted last Wednesday said Banks failed to fulfill a requirement that he knew about which was to be completed within a certain amount of time.

Franz declined to comment on what that requirement was or the amount of time Banks was required to fulfill the requirement.

"Mr. Banks did not fulfill one of the requirements of the position," Franz said. "I cannot tell you what that was."

However, Franz said that Banks was hired in a civil service position which calls for a probation period -- in Banks' case, that period was one year.

According to Franz, Banks was hired to be an advisor to UMD's Black Student Association and to black students, to assist in recruiting black and minority students, to advise in conjunction with the Achievement Center and to take part in the orientation process for new minority students.

Banks was unavailable for comment.

Banks was hired in November of 1987, and prior to his permanent position he served as an acting black student advisor for UMD.

Linda Belote, director of the son; Lenae Ross, senior student personnel worker; Sharon Witherspoon and Lawrence Green, both representing the black student community of UMD; and Claude Washington, who will represent the black community of Duluth.

Belote said the committee is looking for a black student advisor who has at least a B.A., but preferably an M.A., in counseling and administrative skills. Other requirements involve an understanding of black student concerns and prior experience in black student services.

Belote said the new black student advisor would have additional duties outside the UMD community.

These duties would include working with area high school counselors in recruiting black students to UMD and with industries and foundations in developing grants for program development at UMD.

"It's an important role on this campus," Belote said. "I hope we can choose the best person to do this work."

In the interim of Banks' departure, black students have been assigned to someone from the Achievement Center for any help they may need.

Regents Lebedoff, Moore and Hilke do not seek new terms

Timothy Louis Franklin
Staff Writer

The makeup of the University of Minnesota Board of Regents will be quite different over the next year since three of the regents will not seek re-election. David Lebedoff, chairman of the Board of Regents, Wenda Moore and Wally Hilke are the three who will not seek re-election.

In an interview in the Minneapolis Star Tribune this week Lebedoff said, "My reasons are entirely based on family considerations. The last several years I've devoted almost full time to this job, and now it's important for me to be with my family. Every time I've attempted to stay and help out (president-elect) Nils Hasselmo I've thought of my children, and the decision wasn't really that difficult. Three of my reasons for not running again are under seven years old."

Lebedoff will remain as a trustee of the University foundation, a private fundraising group at the University. Lebedoff is also a partner and member of the management committee in the Minneapolis law firm of Lindquist and Vennum.

Another regent whose term is up, Charles McGuigan, said he expects to make a decision considering his election during the next week.

Regent J.P. Grahek, the eighth congressional district representative to the Board of Regents said, "They served their twelve year terms and did a good job. I don't think any of them were swayed to resign. This will not really change the chemistry of the board. We have other regents who have been there for a while. I think it is good for the board to get a few new faces."

Dr. Bruce Gildseth, vice chancellor for Academic Support and Student Affairs at UMD said, "This seems like a natural and healthy transition. The regents, I might add, served very well. But it is always healthy for new blood and new faces to come in. I think it is good for the Board to do that."

for Finance and Operation at UMD said, "All three were very good regents. We will miss them. But it does give us a chance to put some new faces on the board."

In relation to the Hilke position, Fox said that this position must be defined. "If it is to be a student position, then the person should be a student at the time of the election. In Hilke's case, he is no longer a student."

"This seems like a natural and healthy transition. The regents, I might add, served very well."

-Dr. Bruce Gildseth

"I must say that Lebedoff has done an outstanding job in his chairmanship of the Board. He will be really hard to replace. The Board's decision to put in Dick Sauer as interim president after some very trying times was excellent. It will be hard to replace the regents which will be leaving," Fox said.

Chancellor Lawrence Ianni could not be reached for comment.

Rick Bay was approved by the Board of Regents as the new director of men's intercollegiate athletics at the U of M. He will begin his duties immediately. Hasselmo said that Bay "has a strong commitment to the academic performance of athletes, to abiding by the rules and to fielding competitive teams." Bay was the former athletic director at Ohio State.

The appointment of Powers culminates a six-month search process conducted by a committee of five Board members; it was chaired by Duane C. Scribner of Minneapolis.

An engineering scholarship honoring retiring Minnesota Power executive Robert J. Marchetti has been established at UMD. The scholarship will be awarded annually to one or more outstanding students in computer engineering or electronics engineering technology. Recipients must be full-time juniors or seniors with demonstrated financial need who are active in the student branch of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. The permanent endowment was established by the Arrowhead Section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

Campus to be tested for radon

Tony Lasky
News Editor

Residence halls and campus buildings at UMD will be tested for radon gas from Dec. 27-29.

According to Norbert Norman, environmental health and safety specialist, 25 grey metallic discs one and one half inches thick and four inches in diameter wrapped in red tape will be placed around UMD to test worst case radon levels.

"We will be closing off doors, windows and vents to allow as little air circulation as possible into the areas," Norman said.

He said he hopes that students do not open windows and doors in the area where the equipment will be located to prevent the data from being altered.

Although there is no danger to anyone who handles the radon equipment, Norman asks that those who notice the radon equipment please not touch them for fear of damaging the charcoal filter canisters.

Radon is formed when the uranium in rocks and soils decays. The gas filters into buildings through cracks and openings in contact with the ground and collects in lower levels. Radon itself is not harmful, but in the air and body it breaks down into radioactive substances that are deposited in the lungs and cause cancer.

Norman said that no one should be alarmed by the tests. They are just routine checks in the buildings.

The data will be collected on Dec. 29 and sent to Norman's office to be analyzed.

The results of the tests, when completed in two weeks, will be sent to UMD's Auxiliary Services, the deans of departments where tests were conducted, Chancellor Ianni's office and to anyone else who would like the information, Norman said.

Queen is a king at Rice

College Press Service

Rice University's homecoming queen has decided to relinquish his -- yes -- his crown after Cotton Bowl officials said he could not represent Rice at the Jan. 1 football game.

Junior Michael Grubbs, who was also snubbed by Rice officials when they refused to recognize him at the school's Nov. 12 homecoming game, announced he would step down as queen and escort his runner-up, a woman, to the annual Cotton Bowl parade in Dallas.

"We're both really psyched," Grubbs said. "We're both ready to have a great time."

Grubbs entered the Nov. 9 homecoming queen election as a joke, but wound up winning with 266 votes. The runner-up, senior Nancy Jones, received 237 votes. In past years, Rice students have elected a dog and refrigerator.

Straight Talk

What's my beef?

A federal pay raise of $46,000 is my beef.

Gee, I don't know if I could get along with just $90,000 a year and have my own private driver take me to and from work where I could skip out of those boring meetings and go play golf somewhere.

The United States Congress should be ashamed of themselves. It took them over two years to decide whether or not to raise the nation's minimum wage, but the bets are on that our already starving and homeless representatives in Congress will pass this raise with relative haste.

The fact remains that Congress probably will not even have to humiliate themselves by casting a vote for or against the pay raise. If they table the project for thirty days from the time it was sent to Capitol Hill by President Reagan, it would automatically become law on Jan. 9. If these legislators had any guts at all they would vote one way or the other instead of hiding behind their $1,000 mahogany desks.

I think it would be fair if the people got a chance to vote on this issue. Instead of waiting four years for the next election, the people could let Congress know just how good of a job they think they are doing in office. After all, we gave them their jobs didn't we?

Sure the Constitution stipulates that Congress set its own salary, but this unjustified hike is pushing it just a little too far. Consider the time of year that this proposal has been introduced. Our nation faces an unimaginable budget deficit with President-elect Bush saying no tax raises. I suppose that this pay raise is going to come from the people living on the street. Christmas is for giving, so why not give Congress a few more bucks to spend on their yachts while the rest of the taxpayers can barely afford to buy a tree, much less pay for a few presents to put underneath it.

Let's bring this down to Earth. Maybe Congress does deserve a little pay raise, but let's get serious, $46,000 is a bit too much.

These clowns would have $4.7 million dollars a year to be spent on luxury items. Let's see how far that much money could go in terms we can really understand.

That grand sum could put 489 students through four years at UMD.

It could also buy 469,200 cases of beer.

We could feed 9,025 underprivileged, or homeless people three meals a day for ten weeks at UMD's lovely dining center.

UMD could sell 293,250 parking permits (like we will ever see that many places to park in).

The students could buy 93,840,000 plastic cups in the Kirby Deli.

Figuring the average textbook cost at $28 (UMD Bookstore prices), we could purchase 167,571 of these under-priced beauties.

So let's all applaud Congress and their pay raise. I hope they all get coal in their stockings and their yachts all sink.

Oh, and by the way, have an enjoyable Christmas and a pleasant new year.

Bush's boondoggle bash

Three weeks ago an editorial was written about how it would be impossible for Bush to go through his presidency without raising taxes.

The time has now come to once again question Bush, since he will spend over $32 million on the presidential inaugural address. Considering that the inauguration only requires the president-elect to take a 35-word oath of office, that's almost a million dollars per word. Just think, it might even cost extra if we have to read his lips!

Of course Bush says that the expenses are covered by anonymous corporate donations, but isn't that what Ronald Reagan said? Reagan used 1,120 service personnel which cost a total of $1.8 million. The Senate Appropriations Committee also showed that an additional $2.5 million of inaugural expenses were billed to tax payers. Facts are stupid things.

Let's talk about necessities. Do we really need a heated inaugural stand on the steps of the Capitol? We wouldn't want Barbara to catch cold now would we? How about the stupid fact that $2,219 was spent for the white gloves worn by military chauffeurs and ushers. Pretty darn important.

If $32 million isn't enough for you, consider the fact that manpower costs associated with deploying thousands of military personnel at the events are not included in this total.

When compared to the cost of past presidents' inaugural addresses, Bush has managed to double that of Reagan's first address in 1981, and he has left Jimmy Carter in the dust by spending 10 times the amount the peanut man did.

If you are a Bush supporter, don't try to tell me that this increase is a result of inflation because I took that into account.

For all you homeless people that are searching for something to bring you Christmas cheer, I'm sure this editorial isn't helping. For those of you who have homes and plenty to be thankful for, this editorial should create some anger. And for those of you who don't care, I feel sorry for you. Merry Christmas.

Opinion article was wrong

Editor,

I think the opinion article by Matthew Dronen on abortion in the Dec. 8 issue was absolutely wrong. He said in his article that a woman's selfish thinking on whether the baby should be born or not is threatening the stability of America. What a joke! I would say it is the thinking of people like Matthew Dronen that is threatening the stability of America. As Americans and people of sound mind and body, we all should be able to make decisions on our own. Though I am a man just like Matthew Dronen, I will never know the feeling that a woman has whether she decides to have an abortion or not. And as a man, if I could bear a child I would be damn proud to know I live in a country where decisions that involve that part of my life were put into my hands.

Women, along with their husbands or companions, seem to be incompetent in the eyes of Matthew Dronen. He said that the parents are making a guess as to whether the unborn child will be better off dead than alive. Well let me tell you something Matthew Dronen, you don't live with those parents who are making the decision as to whether their child will be born or not.

So editor, the next time you receive an opinion article that is of such grave importance, I think you should pass people like Mr. Dronen by. I think also that if Mr. Dronen feels so strongly about the issue of abortion, why doesn't he just go sit in front of an abortion clinic somewhere and be a protester, while all of us sit back and see where it gets him? It will probably get him thrown in jail for not moving and blocking the door to a man and woman's right.

Sexual Harassment Information

Editor,

The writing of this letter was stimulated by the STATESMAN articles on Professor Fred Robinson's suspension. In the Dec. 8 edition, Professor Robinson argues that the allegations of sexual harassment are false and that he has been denied due process in defending himself. I personally know little about the particulars of this case. However, as a female minority employee of the University, I have long been concerned about ambiguities in the University's harassment policies and procedures which I believe invite violations of rights on both sides of harassment disputes. I am convinced that it would be in everyone's long term interests to critically examine and redefine current policies. Consequently, I take this opportunity to describe what I consider to be the inherent problems in current policies and practices and to suggest alternative solutions to the issue raised.

As currently defined by University policy, there are essentially two distinct types of "sexual harassment." In my opinion, the first type (to which I shall refer below as "Type I Sexual Harassment") is most abhorrent and the most likely to require drastic action by the University. This type of sexual harassment is the use of status and power to solicit sexual favors. In discussing the topic of sexual harassment with my colleagues and students, it is my observation that many believe that the University's sexual harassment policies relate solely to this type of behavior. It is important for people to know that the definition of "sexual harassment" advanced by the University is much broader than this narrow interpretation, and it is to the University's credit that UMD's sexual harassment officer has systematically attempted to notify departments of the broader definition. A second type of behavior which is included in the University's definition of "sexual harassment" does not necessarily entail power differentials nor the solicitation of sexual favors. Rather, the definition encompasses any behavior of a sexual nature which another party finds offensive, such as the telling of sexual jokes or innuendos, using profanity which has sexual meaning, displaying sexually suggestive drawings on one's clothing or in one's office, touching, hugging in a sexually suggestive manner, etc. If the offended party finds such behaviors disturbing enough to interfere with her/his work, sleep, etc., a charge of "sexual harassment" is considered appropriate under present University policies and practices. The information provided in the STATESMAN suggests to me that the allegations against Professor Robinson are of the second type and not of the first type of "sexual harassment" described above.

There are a number of ambiguities inherent in the definition of sexual harassment described above. With regard to the first, it is unclear whether consensual relationships of a sexual nature are included within the definition. This is problematic as the statistics inform us that most romances including marriages, begin in the workplace. Many of these are between people who have an unequal job status. The data also informs us that most romances terminate, often unhappily. My observations over the years are that the person who feels jilted sometimes files a grievance as a way of revenging their unrequited love. University policy hedges on the degree to which it will support a grievance filed by one party of a relationship which was initially consensual but which has degenerated into a conflictual one. I believe that the policies and procedures which I recommend below satisfactorily handle this issue by building in procedural safeguards which take into consideration the fact that relationships do change, that allegations may sometimes be frivolous or unfounded and that the rights of both parties must be protected.

Before making my recommendations, however, I would like to address in greater detail "sexual harassment" of the second type described above. I agree that if someone else's behavior is so objectionable that it is interfering with my ability to function normally, I should have recourse through official University channels to protest and to potentially change that person's offensive behaviors and/or to protect myself from the negative consequences. This basic principle is not only true with regard to behaviors of a sexual nature but also includes behaviors which may be threatening to me because they appear racist, ethnocentric, etc. I have known students on campus, for example, who feel that they have been harassed because their race, culture and religion were different than that of their instructor. They said that the instructor made racist jokes in class and that he graded them down if they expressed views which were different than his on such issues as treaty rights and the war in Nicaragua. The problem is that the lines between "academic freedom" as well as "freedom of speech and expression" on the one hand and "harassment" on the other are very ill-defined. What happens when a student's abilities to perform in a class are negatively affected

Hazing: What's the point?

Linda M. Keppers
Editor-in-Chief

Hazing: placing (someone, especially an initiate into a fraternity) in an embarrassing or humiliating situation by forcing him to perform menial or foolish tasks.

Everyone, at one time or another, does something embarrassing. Sometimes we do humiliating acts on a dare when we are young. Other times we are set up by our friends to do something silly in the form of a practical joke.

In the not so recent past, there was a boy named Mark Seeberger who attended the University of Texas-Austin. He pledged a fraternity, and one night he was forced by his friends to drink 18 ounces of rum while handcuffed to the top of a van. Afterwards, he was taken home and put to bed. He was dead in the morning.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not saying that fraternities are terrible organizations that do nothing but drink, but I am saying that they do drink quite often. This drinking has resulted in 43 hazing deaths in the United States in the past ten years.

Some universities have tried banning Greek groups from campuses, but this does not seem to be working. The reasonable solution seems to be enforcing strict policies within the groups and have anti-hazing fraternities serve as examples.

In the case of Seeberger, his parents are now seeking $40 million in punitive damages from the University of Texas-Austin and the national chapter of the fraternity he was pledging.

University officials, parents and the State Legislature are realizing that the "silly" things students do to gain acceptance into fraternities are often dangerous.

In America, there are now 29 states that enforce anti-hazing laws, and there is move in Washington to make hazing a federal crime.

Some may say that I don't know what I'm talking about since I've never belonged to a fraternity. However, I have pledged a sorority and although I am not very active (if at all) in this group, I was once considered an active member. Yes, I do know what it is like -- I have had first-hand experience.

During the pledge period, I was made to do a lot of silly things. (I was not made to drink at anytime so if you are an administrator, don't get excited and try to outlaw sororities on this campus.) The reason they wanted me sober when I was going through hazing activities was so I would remember how humiliating the four weeks actually were.

I joined a sorority along with a lot of other people in order to become part of a group, make new friends and form lasting relationships. What I got was something I hadn't bargained for.

During the first four weeks, a period known as pledging, I was not treated like a friend but like a waitress. I took orders from active sorority members and brought them their food. This is not terribly bad, but when you are trying to get to know someone it is nice to talk about something else besides how many salt packages they would like with their french fries.

What is the point of all this? Some psychology books state that hazing is done so that a true loyalty can be established among the group. The effect it had on me was that I decided that half way through pledging that I was going to quit. I was then told by active members that most every pledge feels like quitting, but that I could hang in there and do it. I did.

I went through a night of humiliation. I was taken to just about every public place imaginable in the Twin Ports area and made to do something stupid. I myself was not bothered by this very much because it was all in good fun, right? But it was the active members who were having the fun -- at my expense.

The next year it was my turn to be the one who got to watch the pledges make fools of themselves, which I thought would be fun since the members the previous year had had so much fun watching me as a pledge. However, it did not turn out this way. It's not that much fun to watch a person do things they would never do if they were not told to just to be a member of the sorority. This is one of the reasons I became "totally inactive," or in other words, quit.

This period called pledging does not necessarily involve hazing in every sorority and fraternity on this campus. I know that at least one of the three sororities on campus does not participate in hazing. However, to my knowledge, all three fraternities on campus participate in some type of hazing activities during the pledging period.

The sororities and fraternities participate in so many positive things on this campus: donating blood, helping out during weekend functions, volunteering escort services and sponsoring the book exchange. In the end, however, it seems that hazing may undo all the good that sororities and fraternities do.

Many people seem to forget what Christmas is all about. They go to the mall and see Santa Claus, buy gifts for friends and relatives and buy Christmas cards. What we should remember is that Christmas is not really about all this.

Christmas is about the birth of Christ -- shepherds and kings guided to Bethlehem by a star to witness the birth of a different kind of king. It is a time to remember why he came to earth.

It is a time to be thankful for what we have and remember those who are less fortunate.

Thank God for the roof over your head. Consider what kind of Christmas the homeless people are going to have. They are on the streets with no place to go. They see other people walking down the street full of that holiday cheer buying expensive gifts for the special people in their lives. They can't even afford to buy a blanket to keep themselves warm. Perhaps this is why there is such a high rate of suicide during the holiday season.

Thank God for having a full stomach. In college, students complain about what kind of food they have to eat. Have you ever seen pictures of people in Ethiopia? They could just as well be you, but they aren't. Thank God for that macaroni and cheese and SPAM dinner. I know I do.

Thank God for family and friends. Many people come from broken homes and have had tough childhoods. Others don't have friends at all which makes it painful for them during the holiday season -- they have no one to share the joy and good cheer with. If you see people like this, try to help them. You never know the good you may do.

Thank God that you are in college getting an education. Many people will never have the opportunity to better their lives in this way. Try to educate yourself at every opportunity. Education doesn't just happen in the classroom, though, it happens everywhere. It even happens when you get involved in groups here at UMD or other places.

Thank God for your job while at school. You may do something you don't want to do at work and deal with jerks, but you're making money. Besides that, you get a sense of satisfaction out of making it on your own. Try to remember that soon you will be making more money than the person who now orders you around. Not that money is the only important thing, but you can't survive without it.

Thank God you live in America. Where our freedoms are of utmost importance. Take advantage of these freedoms. Many people do not have the freedoms that we do. They look at ours and are envious of them.

Take time to be thankful this holiday season. Remember that Christmas is more than Santa Claus, gifts and lutefisk. Merry Christmas!

by sexist, racist, homophobic or anti-semitic content or innuendos? What happens when a student feels that he or she has been given a low grade in a class because of gender, race, religion, political persuasion, etc. or because of having expressed a viewpoint on a politically controversial issue which was different from the instructor's? In my opinion, these are very serious issues but of a different nature, requiring different remedies than those addressed by the "Type I Sexual Harassment Policies" described above. In fact, the University may be committing "overkill" by including the second type of discrimination within its formal sexual harassment policy, while at the same time policies and procedures for political persuasion, sexual orientation, etc. are underdeveloped on campus. That is, there are not clearcut mechanisms whereby victims of this type of unfairness can grieve and receive the help they need to change the climate in which they work and/or study. Given these considerations, I believe that the second type of "sexual harassment" described above should be transferred into a broader category of "Discrimination Against Protected Classes" Policy and that the University's "sexual harassment" policies should deal exclusively with "Type I Sexual Harassment" described above.

I will preface my recommendations for policy changes by stating that with any type of discrimination, including sexual harassment, the ultimate objective would be to improve the social environment in which we all work and study. There is ample evidence in the social-psychological literature that punitive measures are counterproductive in attempting to develop such an environment.

Students wished a "Moo Christmas"

Annie Frisbee
Staff Writer

The Main Street Store invites UMD students to have a very "Moo Christmas" this year.

The store's window painting of a cow santa, cow reindeer and holly was created by Laura Albertson -- a UMD art education major.

Albertson, who has a cow collection of her own, chose this theme for its originality and the control it gave her over design.

She is also responsible for the candles painted on the windows of the Bulldog Shop and the holly and bows which decorate the Second Edition windows.

"I pretty much worked nine hours straight for two days," Albertson said. She painted freestyle with tempura paints.

Albertson did the painting from sketches, making her own adjustments where they were needed.

With regard to the cow idea, Pam Mattson, assistant manager of the UMD stores, said "This is the first year we've done that large of a theme."

The Main Street Store's interior is also decorated for Christmas; it includes six Christmas trees.

The decorations will be up through the month of December.

In relation to the windows Albertson said, "I don't have to clean them, and I feel sorry for the people who do."

Moo-ing into town!

"The weather outside is frightful, the snow outside delightful. We haven't any place to go, let it snow, let it snow, let it snow." The Main Street Store is into the holiday season with those moo-ing reindeer displayed on the stores windows.

Student helps others for holiday

Sandra Germaine
Staff Writer

When thinking about the holidays one conjurs up images of family get-togethers, gifts and grandma trying to shove one more piece of pie onto our plates. Unfortunately for some, these aren't memories of holidays past, they're daydreams of what holidays could be like. One person bringing those daydreams a little closer to reality is Betsy Albert.

Albert is a senior psychology major at UMD who finds the time to go to school, raise a family and lend a helping hand to those who need it. Albert has a simple philosophy "life is a gift -- what we do with life is our choice, and the only way to get is by giving." Working on various projects here on campus for the hungry and homeless, Albert has found that she has received more than she has ever given.

"To see a face light up when someone gets a basket of food or a warm jacket makes me realize how truly lucky I am," Albert said.

Albert recently dressed up as an elf for a Christmas party held by the Human Development Center for 150 members of the community with mental illness.

"Through donations we were able to fill some wish lists people had filled out for Christmas. Their lists weren't outrageous -- some wanted a new pair of socks, others wished for a magazine or a book. It's just a good feeling to give someone something no matter how small it may seem," Albert said.

She finds it somewhat scary to see how many people are in need in the community, and she is grateful that she is one who is able to give to others. Albert feels that taking care of herself enables her to help others, and she thinks it is definitely easier to be the giver instead of the receiver.

"It's amazing how a little time and caring can make such a big difference in others as well as my own life," she said.

Gather into a ball and knead gently until smooth. DO NOT OVERKNEAD! Roll out 3/8" thick and cut into 1"x2" rectangles. Prick with fork three times and chill thoroughly before separating. ## Letters from 5A

In fact, what I see happening is that white male faculty members are becoming quite "uptight" by what appears to them to be arbitrarily applied sexual harassment rules punitively targeted at them. What some male colleagues tell me is that they now insist when counseling female students in their office that the door remain open even when the student has asked for confidentiality, that they no longer invite female students or faculty out to lunch or for a "TGIF" drink even though that type of conviviality used to be customary in their department, that they never compliment any woman on her appearance even though women sometimes compliment them on their appearance, and that they will not touch (except in a handshake) any woman on campus even though they see feminist faculty occasionally hug each other as well as their male colleagues. In short, the atmosphere between men and women on campus has become "chilled" as a result of the punitive way in which sexual harassment policies are being interpreted and enforced. In short, I believe women have a great deal to lose and not much to gain from such punitive measures as have been used to "discipline" Professor Robinson. In fact, the only time suspension would be appropriate, in my opinion, is when a victim of sexual harassment appears to be in immediate danger. (From everything I can gather, the suspension of Professor Robinson is, however, not for this purpose but that it is intended to be punitive and to set an "example" to any other professors who might consider using sexual profanity in an argument with subordinates.) Rather than punitive, I feel the University's policies and procedures should concentrate on prevention and remediation.

With regard to "Type I Sexual Harassment," I would narrow the definition to unwanted (non-consensual) solicitation for sexual favors in which a coercive use of power is explicit or implied. Acknowledgement would be given to the fact that relationships may move from consensual to non-consensual. The policy would relate only to recurring behaviors of a non-consensual nature after the relationship had deteriorated.

Basically, while the recipient of unwelcome behavior should have the right to say "no," it is also his/her responsibility to communicate that unambiguous "no" to the perpetrator before filing a formal grievance. In some cases, the accused perpetrator will be recalcitrant, and a hearing in which the rights of both parties to counsel and cross-examining should be respected. Again, I feel that the intent should be at constructing a positive resolution rather than punitive retribution.

posed to be a one-horse race as the 1988-89 season began. The Golden Gophers of Minnesota had claimed the 1987-88 crown and had added a talented group of freshmen along with a few departed Olympians to the team, supposedly an unstoppable combination.

The Gophers started the season just as predicted, winning their first six in a row in an impressive fashion. Then in early November they went to Marquette, Mich., to face Northern Michigan University, and something funny happened -- the NMU Wildcats beat the Gophers. It must have been a preview of things to come because since that cold November weekend on the Upper Peninsula, the Wildcats have won 11 of 13 games and have taken over the once-secure Gophers as the number one team in the WCHA. While NMU has been flying high, the Gophers have lost some games that they were supposed to win, including two to UMD, and are reeling behind a rash of injuries to key players.

Meanwhile, back on the west end of the big lake they call Gitchie Gumee, the UMD Bulldogs have had the luck of facing these two teams eight times in their last 12 games. To Bulldog head coach Mike Sertich, who now owns a 156-109-13 record in his seventh season at the helm of UMD's hockey program, this doesn't present a problem.

"It's a disadvantage if you lose," Sertich said, "but you've got to play them sooner or later."

UMD last faced Northern Michigan just two weeks ago when the Bulldogs were swept by the Wildcats on the road. UMD's Upper Peninsula woes continued as they dropped two close games by scores of 3-2 in overtime and 6-5.

Now the Wildcats, ranked third nationally in the latest NCAA Division I poll, have to come to the Duluth Entertainment and Convention Center, where they have only won once in their history. Most agree that there are two different Northern Michigan teams, the red-hot one that plays at home and the mediocre one that plays on the road. NMU is currently 10-2-1 in Lakeview Arena and 4-4-0 in away games, but coach Sertich doesn't see this as a Wildcat weakness.

"They swept Denver in

Bulldog senior goalie John Hyduke had another good series this past weekend against Alaska-Fairbanks, giving up only two goals in the Bulldog sweep over the Nanooks. He's still looking for that elusive first shutout in a UMD uniform, with his next chance coming tonight when the Bulldogs host WCHA-leading Northern Michigan at the Duluth Entertainment and Convention Center.

Denver and played very well out East (beating Boston University and New Hampshire)," Sertich said. "They're getting great goaltending and playing with a lot of confidence."

The master of the Northern Michigan net this year has been sophomore goaltender Bill Pye. After seeing limited action last season in the shadow of Mike Jeffrey, Pye has emerged as a fine net-minder. Pye recorded 86 saves over the weekend in two wins over Denver, allowing only four goals and raising his saves percentage to .914.

The Wildcat offense has been balanced so far, with an incredible fourteen players scoring in double figures (UMD has seven). Senior Phil Berger and standout freshman Dallas Drake lead the way with 28 and 25 points respectively.

Last weekend, while NMU was skating past Denver and taking over the WCHA lead, the Bulldogs were regrouping at home as they faced non-conference opponent Alaska-Fairbanks. The Nanooks proved to be no match for the Bulldogs, despite some less-than-stellar play at times, who came away with 5-1 and 6-1 wins. It was a big weekend for sophomore Duluthian Darrin Amundson. Amundson went almost a season and a half without a collegiate goal but then collected one in each of the Alaska-Fairbanks games, including the game-winner in Saturday night's contest.

Jerry Chumola and Chris Lindberg also had two-goal weekends, with Chumola netting a pair on Friday evening and Lindberg icing two on Saturday. Chumola leads the Bulldogs in scoring with 21 points, while Lindberg is a close second with 20.

Senior goaltender John Hyduke just can't seem to find that first collegiate shutout. "The Duker" turned away 54 of the Nanooks' 56 shots on goal over the weekend and has now held opponents to one goal four times this season. Hyduke has stared the last four consecutive games and seems to have taken over the number one goaltending spot.

"Right now he (Hyduke) has got the upper hand. He's been playing quite well," Sertich said.

BETWEEN THE PIPES: Sophomore right wing Darren Nauss has been on a scoring streak as of late, netting four goals in his last three games ... The Bulldogs are a dismal 1-5-1 in their last seven WCHA games ... Northern Michigan was the last WCHA team that the Bulldogs swept (Jan. 29 and 30, 1988, at the DECC) ... For the first time in a long time the Bulldogs will have the Christmas and New Year holiday off -- no games are scheduled between Dec. 23 and Jan. 6 ... Sophomores have accounted for 44 of the Bulldogs' 73 goals so far this season ... Other WCHA teams in this week's NCAA poll include UM-Twin Cities (sixth), Denver (12th), Wisconsin (13th), Michigan Tech (tied for 14th) and North Dakota (tied for 14th) ... UMD's power-play woes continue -- the Bulldogs have scored just one goal in their last 32 man-advantage situations ... The Bulldogs' games after the holidays will be home contests with Lowell and Maine on Jan. 6 and 7 ..

Last weekend the UMD Wrestling team paid a visit to the UM-Morris campus to compete in the Cougar Invitational. The Bulldogs grabbed second place out of 10 schools competing in the event.

Morris won the invitational with 73 points, followed by UMD with 56.25 points. Wilmar Community College finished third with 49.5 points, and Moorhead State finished fourth with 49.25 points.

UMD had champions in the 118 lb. and 150 lb. weight classes. In the 118 lb. class, both Todd Guillaume and Bob Sterriker from UMD made it to the finals, so Sterriker forfeited to Guillaume to prevent injury within the team.

UMD's Trevor Lundgren was the champion in the 150 lb. weight class, defeating David Haus of WCC in the final round. In the second round of the competition, Lundgren claimed a pin in 52 seconds against Troy Vagle from UM-Morris.

This was the last match for the Bulldog team before the new year. The wrestling team leaves 1988 behind with an untarnished 2-0 record in dual meets and an impressive record in tournament action. They fought their way to a first place finish in the Lakehead Invitational in a five team field, took fourth in the St. Cloud Invitational out of 18 teams and capped the season with the second place finish in Morris last weekend.

Holiday Tournament at Northern State University in Aberdeen, S.D. The Bulldogs play the Mustangs of Southwest State in the Dec. 28 opening-round game.

UMD has beaten Southwest State the last three times they've faced them. The last time the Bulldogs lost to the Mustangs was on Feb. 6, 1987, in Marshall, Minn.,

86-76 in overtime. That loss also happens to be the last time UMD has lost to any NIC foe. They've won a school-record 17 straight games against their fellow conference teams.

Numbers? Here's some more.

The UMD Bulldogs have gone 34-1 in their last 35 NIC games. They have gone 45-1 in their last 46 home NIC games. They have beaten

Northern State seven times in a row, Bemidji State and Moorhead State nine times in a row, Winona State 18 times in a row and, hold still, the University of Minnesota-Morris 22 times in a row going back to the 1978 season.

UMD lost four all-conference players from last year's 12-0 team, though they are favored to win the conference this year.

Do these last two paragraphs say something about domination?

The Bulldogs, however, have lost two of their last three games to nonconference opponents.

On Monday night, when we were all reading "Ditka is a Dork" banners at the Monday night football game, the Bulldogs were losing to the Michigan Tech Huskies out in Houghton, Mich. The 59-50 loss came two nights after UMD beat (up) UW-Superior 51-40 in Superior.

In Houghton the sluggish 'Dogs fell victim to the 5-6 Huskies as UMD forward Dave Zollar continued holding the hot hand, scoring 19 points after turning in a 21-point performance Saturday night against the Yellowjackets.

Zollar set a new UMD single-season record Monday when he hit his 16th three-point field goal of the season. He nailed three more in the game, giving him 19 for the season.

Above the rim: Mark Robinson leads the Bulldogs in free throw shooting, hitting on .800 percent of his shots (32 of 40)...Jay Guidinger continues to dominate on the boards, collecting 17 rebounds against Superior. No Bulldog has had 17 rebounds in a game since 1984. Guidinger is averaging 9.9 boards per game (99 total)...The Bulldogs record now stands at 6-4. After ten games last season, UMD was 7-3.

Mark Robinson pressures Mankato State's guard Byron Lindsey during last Thursday's non-conference battle. The game was decided when Maverick guard Mike Cobb scored his first field goal of the game, a running layup, as the buzzer sounded. Cobb's basket came only six seconds after Robinson hit both ends of a one-and-one free throw situation that put the 'Dogs in the lead by one.

vantage Monday night when they defeated Michigan Tech 82-63 in Houghton, Mich.

It was their first regular season game played away from Romano gym, and they took charge early. Dina Kangas' 25 points combined with points from nine other players helped the Bulldogs maintain the lead throughout the entire game.

UMD also showed that they can stand up against a championship team. Last Friday night the Bulldogs faced and conquered North Dakota State in a 77-69 win. The North Dakota Bison have been North Central Conference champs for two years running, and they gave the Bulldogs a hard-fought challenge.

At half-time the Bulldogs only led by two baskets and had only a .353 field goal shot percentage. But the Bulldogs came back strong in the second half and never lost the lead. Dina Kangas added a team-leading 17 points and 14 rebounds to her total.

The Bulldogs are off until Dec. 30 when they will be competing in the North Dakota State Classic in Fargo. Other teams competing in the tournament will be Eastern Montana and the Air Force Academy.

In the paint:

Dina Kangas leads the Bulldog women with 103 rebounds as well as having an 18.9 points per game average. She is followed by Kelli Ritzer who boasts a 14.6 points per game average as well as setting a Bulldog single game scoring record with 33 points in a losing effort against Northern Michigan on Dec.4.

Swim for fitness

Jay Faherty
Staff Writer

For the second consecutive year, rec sports is offering students the opportunity to participate in their Swim for Fitness class.

The class is under the leadership of Dan Gorski, the organizer of the swimming third of the multifitness triathlon program.

Gorski feels swimming becomes so popular in the winter because "It is plain old cold outside and running on an indoor track just isn't the same."

Swim for Fitness meets from 3-4:30 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

The main purpose for the class is to provide some organization, encouragement and fun while swimming.

During a regular class, the participants go through lap swimming, interval swims and other organized means of swimming.

Swim for Fitness is an appropriate name. Swimming is great for recuperating from injuries, improving muscle tone and working on the cardiovascular system because it works on the entire body.

Although there has not been any form of an organized swim meet yet, the class is hoping to scrimmage local high school teams sometime soon.

The class is only $15, which includes lifeguard supervision, Gorski's instruction and lots of swimming.

Persons interested in joining the class are encouraged to sign up at the Rec Sports Cashiers' Office in the Sports and Health Center.

The 18 people swimming for fitness right now will be glad to welcome others. There is always room in the pool somewhere!

Konnsense: What's in club for you?

Lisa Konn
Rec Sports Editor

Are you looking for a way to expand your horizons through sports? If so, look no further than the UMD outdoor recreation clubs and sport clubs.

There is something for everyone from beginners to seasoned fanatics.

Some clubs focus on extramural competition while others take a more relaxed attitude toward the group's interests, but they all work on learning and perfecting skills and building friendships.

The following is a brief summary of each club's activities. Check them out! One of them may be just what you have looking for.

Outdoor Recreation Clubs

Cycling

Cycling has recently resurfaced as a club here at UMD. This club has active practices in the fall and the spring, and they work in conjunction with the Multifitness Program during these times.

If you are looking for someone to do cycling workouts with or you want to get involved in cycling competition, this club may be for you. Contact Mark Wald at 727-5059 for more information.

Kayaking

The kayak club is always a favorite for outdoor enthusiasts. Whether it is white water kayaking in the late spring or learning skills in the UMD pool during the winter, this club always has a fervent crowd.

The club invites beginners and pros alike to join in their activities. Contact Rick Martens at 728-1207 for more information.

Nordic Skiing

This club calls itself a racing organization. The members feel their basic appeal is to the more competitive and physically well-tuned athletes. The club travels to weekend meets and holds regular practices.

The nordic ski club holds weekly informational and planning meetings at 2 p.m. on Thursdays in K333 for anyone who is interested in being a part of a committed group of skiers. Contact Tim Nelson at 727-0452 or Julie Reinchenborn at 726-6030 for additional information.

North Shore Climbers

The north shore climbers will soon be active all year long with the new addition of the indoor climbing wall in the Multipurpose Building. The indoor wall will allow club members to learn and perfect skills throughout the winter. The club schedules weekly climbing trips in the region and periodic long distance climbing trips. Beginners and veteran climbing enthusiasts are welcome. Contact Tony Vezzoli at 724-3546 for more information.

Rod & Gun

Contact Tom Nelson at 726-6500 for information about this club.

Wuda Wooch

The wuda wooch club primarily exists to provide an opportunity for inexperienced and experienced outdoor people alike to learn and perfect outdoor skills such as camping and hiking. Another goal of the club is to promote an increased awareness of the environment.

The club meets at 7:30 p.m. every Wednesday in K323 to plan outdoor group activities which consist of camping trips and various other activities including sponsoring a nationally sanctioned boomerang tournament every spring. Contact David Sohlstrom at 728-5993 for more information.

Club Sports Union --Sport Clubs

Broomball

The newest sport club on campus has also become the one with the largest membership.

Broomball lovers are invited to come and join in on the club's scrimmages. The club helps members perfect skills and generates a lot of social activity.

It is not all serious ball, but it gives those who are really interested in broomball more time to do what they love. Contact Scott Reid at 724-8033 for more information.

Men's Rugby & Women's Rugby

Rugby is one of the oldest and most growth-oriented clubs on campus.

The men's and women's teams exist as two clubs, but they share practice time, game strategies and lots of fun. The two clubs provide instruction and competition on a local and regional level.

Anyone interested is encouraged to join one of the two clubs for fitness and great times. Contact Andy Foster (724-5838) or Amy Kieker (727-1229) for more information.

Soccer Club

One of the strongest clubs on campus has always been the soccer club.

The club offers its members the opportunity to expand their personal skills through practice and regional competition by participating in both outdoor and indoor tournaments. Contact Mark Landras at 726-6027 for more information.

Volleyball

The volleyball club is for the serious athletes and also for those who are just out for some good volleyball fun.

UMD, in conjunction with the local United States Volleyball Association, formed the first university volleyball club in the area.

The goals of the organization are to encourage participation, build skill and increase interest in power volleyball. The volleyball club participates in and has won several USVBA regional tournaments. Club meetings and practices are held twice a week. Contact Mark Sperr at 724-8261 for more information.

Other sport clubs include:

Alpine Skiing

Bowling

Lake Superior Disc Club (Frisbee)

Contact the club in which you are interested by calling their contact person or by dropping a note in the club's mailbox in the Student Association office located across from Kirby information desk.

THERE'S AN ARMY OF CHOICES OUT THERE.

It's not easy. Sometimes the number of choices you have seems mind-boggling. But sometimes, when you know what you want, freedom of choice is a great thing. Look at today's Army.

There's the Active Army and the Army Reserve. If you qualify for Active, you serve 2-4 years, choose from over 300 skills to train in, and in over 80 of those skills you could be eligible for up to $25,200 in college money.

If you already have a job or are in school, consider the Army Reserve. All it takes is one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Plus, you'll learn a useful skill and earn over $1,200 a year.

Both choices give you career experience, physical conditioning, new friends, good pay, and a chance to serve your country. It's all up to you. Call your local Army Recruiter.
